

The creek was whispering tonight. Little Sunny the quokka found it by

There, at the water's edge, sat the most interesting creature she

The platypus had already seen her. It blinked once, slowly. Then it

Slowly, without really meaning to, Sunny became still too. Her breathing

The night grew louder. A frog called somewhere distant. A breeze rustled

The creek kept whispering its soft, gentle nothing.
The platypus lowered its Sweet dreams!

See you next time, little one ☐

Sonny's Cozy Quokka Bedtime Tales

By Jamie Wigg