Sonny's Cozy Quokka Bedtime Tales

Sunny and the Sleepy Wombat

In the soft blue evening, Sunny wandered by the old gum tree. Snuffle, snuffle — what was that?

Out waddled a round little wombat,
blinking his sleepy eyes.

He opened his mouth and gave a big, wide, wobbly yawn.

“Hello,” said Sunny. The wombat blinked back, warm and kind.

He was round and sturdy, soft and grey,
with the gentlest, sleepest face.

“Come and see my home,” he said, and waddled slowly on.

Down a round little tunnel, beneath the old gum tree's roots.

Inside was a warm, snug burrow, soft with dry grass and leaves.

Deep and quiet and safe — the cosiest place of all.

The wombat curled up, round as a smooth grey stone.

“This is where I sleep all through the day,”
he said softly.

Outside, the moon rose silver over the old gum tree.

Together they peeked out at the soft and gentle night.

Fireflies drifted by. The whole world was soft and still.

The wombat yawned again — and Sunny yawned as well.

“Goodnight, moon,” they whispered up to the sky.

The wombat settled deep in his warm and cosy burrow.

And Sunny padded home through the cool and quiet grass.

She curled into her own soft nest, warm and safe and snug.

Her eyes fell closed. She dreamed of the moon and a round, sleepy friend.

The End.
Sweet dreams, little one. Goodnight.

As evening settles over the bush, Sunny the little quokka meets a round, sleepy wombat who shows her his warm burrow beneath the old gum tree. Together they say goodnight to the moon. A calm, cosy bedtime tale for winding down and drifting off to sleep. Perfect for little ones ages 1-5.
