Sunny and the Flying Fox

Sonny's Cozy Quokka Bedtime Tales — Book 1

WRITTEN BY JAMIE WIGG

The sky was the colour of ripe plums when Sunny first saw them.
One. Then three. Then many.

Flying foxes, sailing out from their roost in the old fig tree.
Their wings were wide and dark, moving through the air without a sound.

No flap, no flutter, just a long, smooth, swooping glide.
Sunny stood very still and watched.

They were so large and so quiet.
She had not known something so big could move so softly.

One flew low, close enough that Sunny could see the warm dark fur of its body and its little fox-like face.

Drinking from a blossom.
Then it was gone again, back into the darkening sky.

The others followed their own paths —
long curved arcs through the air, each one different.

Each one beautiful.
Sunny watched until the sky turned from plum to deep navy.

The stars came out, and still the flying foxes moved above her.
Silent and grand.

She sat down in the soft grass and looked up.
The bush was full of quiet.

The flying foxes were just shapes now —
dark against the dark sky, moving and moving.

She breathed out a long, slow breath.
And drifted off beneath the wings of night.

Her eyes grew heavy.
The stars twinkled on, keeping watch through the night.

And a tiny smile stayed on her face.
Goodnight, Sunny. Goodnight, flying foxes. Goodnight, little one.
