Sunny and the Sleepy Wombat

Sonny's Cozy Quokka Bedtime Tales — Book 2

WRITTEN BY JAMIE WIGG

The bush grew quiet as the sun slipped away.
Sunny sat in the soft grass, watching the first stars.

A rustle came from the tangled roots nearby.
Out trundled a round little wombat, slow and sleepy.

He had a wide flat nose and stubby little legs,
and fur the colour of warm brown earth.

"Hello," said Sunny. "Where are you going?"
"Home to my burrow," the wombat yawned, "to sleep."

A watercolor illustration of two possums at night. On the left, a light brown possum with a white chest patch stands upright, looking towards the right. On the right, a darker brown possum stands upright, pointing its right hand towards a small, round, wooden door set into the hollow of a large, gnarled tree trunk. The door is slightly ajar, revealing a warm, yellow light from within. The background is a dark blue night sky with a crescent moon and several small white stars. The ground is covered with dry grass and leaves. The entire scene is framed by a dark, irregular border.

He showed her a round little door, tucked snugly beneath the old gum-tree roots.

Inside it was warm and dark and soft,
lined with dry grass and fallen leaves.

"It's so cosy," Sunny whispered.
"The best place to close your eyes," said the wombat.

They sat and watched the moon climb high,
round and golden over the sleepy bush.

Fireflies drifted by like tiny lanterns,
blinking soft and slow in the warm night air.

The wombat gave a great big sleepy yawn.
“Goodnight, little Sunny,” he said, and went inside.

Sunny found her own soft patch of grass,
and curled up warm beneath the whispering leaves.

The bush breathed slow and gentle all around.
Everything was still, and safe, and quiet.

Her eyes grew heavy as the stars looked down.
One slow blink... then another... then one more.

And Sunny drifted off beneath the moon,
as snug and safe as the wombat in his burrow.

Goodnight, Sunny. Goodnight, little wombat.
Goodnight, sleepy bush. Goodnight, little one.
