Sweet Dreams

A magpie was singing in the dark. Not the full bright carol it saved for

It was singing with its beak barely open, the notes coming out quiet

She thought: it is singing the bush to sleep. She sat down at

It would keep singing, probably, long after she fell asleep. The notes

Soft and round and private. And it sang her to sleep.

Goodnight, Sunny.
Goodnight, magpie.
Goodnight, little one.

Sweet dreams!

See you next time, little one ☐
